A Tribute Fit For a King

It will be the first site on Washington's National Mall to commemorate an African-American. And the Martin Luther King Jr. National Memorial may be the last one in the "Monumental Core," where Lincoln, Jefferson and FDR are honored. Ground will be broken late this year if fund-raising is finished. The memorial foundation needs $60 million more to build and maintain the tribute to the slain civil-rights leader.

Dr. King: He will join three Presidents.
